

Egis: a first toll interoperability contract in the US

On 24th September, Egis signed the contract with the “Alliance for Toll Interoperability” (ATI) in the US. This contract includes the supply, implementation and operation of the nationwide interoperability HUB for billing the tolls of interstate motorists, based on license plate camera reads and transponders.

The Alliance for Toll Interoperability has grown to include forty (40) full members consisting of toll road operators from within the United States, and three (3) affiliate members from Canada, Australia and New York USA. It was founded in 2009 to promote and implement interstate interoperability for the benefit of customers and member agencies. This mission is becoming increasingly important as electronic non-stop toll systems are being planned and implemented across the United States.

Egis and sanef are 50/50 shareholders of Secure Interagency Flow LLC (SIF), in charge of the interoperability contract. Within this joint venture, Egis will focus on operating activities and sanef its america Inc. will supply the system.

The nationwide interoperability HUB agreement includes add-on services such as financial reconciliation or dispute resolution, and paves the way for the future implementation of other services such as violation enforcement or license plate data lookup. These add-on services further enhance the ability of toll agencies to reduce operating costs, as large volumes of transactions are expected to be processed through the HUB.

Subscriptions open starting October 2013 and first matching capabilities by the end of the year. After an initial ramp-up phase of one year, the contract will last for another 5 years with possible further extensions.

This new success paves the way for Egis to enter a prosperous US tolling market.
